to do (heir part in checking and punishing crueity to children and dumb animals is made by the two anti-crueity societies in Washington, which have set aside April 12-17 as "Be Kind to Animals Week." The Washington Humane Society seeks to protect helpless children from the cruelty of parents and others guilty of wrong; also to save horses and mules and other animals from cruelty, by invoking for them the protection of the law. The National Society for the Humane Regulation of Vivisection has for fts aim the abolishment of unnecessary cruelty and suffering inflicted upon animals by science. Humane Society 39 Years Old, A summary of the work of both societies is contained in the Year Book of the Humane Society for 1919, and the last issue of "Mercy and Truth," the official publication of the two societies. The Humane Society was organized in Washington thirty-nine years ago.

"During the year 1919," it points out, "the agents of the society examined 2,890 horses and prosecuted 117 cases. In addition, the agents put to death, with as little pain as ease, or hopelessly injured by acci-Seelety Has Renebed 400 Mark.
